A Strange Story.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WATSEKA, ILL., June 23.—Sheriff Barber, of this place, has received a letter from a man now serving out his sentence in the Penitentiary at Waupun, Wis., in which the writer confesses to a murder alleged to have been committed at Milford, in this county, a year ago, at which time the writer claims he committed a robbery. The letter sets forth that he was interrupted at the time of the robbery and shot a man who he supposed was an officer about to effect his arrest. The singular part of the story is that while the facts of the robbery tally exactly with the minute description given in the letter, nothing has ever been known of the alleged murder. The grounds where the body is claimed to have been hidden are being carefully searched. It is thought to be a scheme on the part of a jailbird to get out of the Penitentiary in order to be brought here and then effect his escape.

The Convention proceeded to ballot again with the following result. Combined vote, Wheeler 50, Potter 53, Conkling 32, Lapham 17, Haskins 2, Folger 11. No choice.

The Convention then proceeded to vote again, Astor leading off with a change from Platt to Hoskins. Combined vote—Depew 53, Kernan 53, Platt 27, Cornell 7, Crowley 6, Hoskins 5, Tremaine 1. No choice. On motion of Jacobs the Convention adjourned.

The Bribery Investigation.

ALBANY, N. Y., June 23.—The Bradley-Sessions investigating committee resumed its work this morning.

Jas. Tillinghast was sworn—Am employed by the Central and Hudson River Railroad since April 15 as assistant to the President. Previous to that date was superintendent of the road since 1869. Am almost continually along the line of the road. Am engaged some little in business in Buffalo. Never raised any money on my own credit May 24 or 25. Graves, of this city, had cashed for me a New York draft for $20,000. Have done business with the house of Chase & Atkins and their successors for the past eleven years. May 25, after the draft was cashed, I went to Buffalo by the midnight train. Told Graves I would like to have currency for the draft to take to Buffalo with me. Took it there and put the money in my private safe in Buffalo. Later on it was deposited in the bank. Did not talk with any member of the Legislature the night I received the money. First met Barber a few weeks ago by accident in the hall of the Delavan House—was introduced to him. Went to Richardson's room in the Delavan House to ask him to telegraph me from day to day the progress of the Senatorial vote. Never met Depew in Barber's room. The changing of the draft was simply a private matter of my own. Don't know that any member of Kissam, Whitney & Co.'s banking firm is in any way connected with the Central Road. Don't know Charley Edwards or Edward Phelps. That currency was finally used in Buffalo.

Tillinghast said it was no unusual thing for the State Banks at Buffalo to be short of currency; furnished currency to a Buffalo Bank a few weeks ago; was in Canada on May 31, the day of the first ballot; did not think a ballot would be held May 24; Richardson telegraphed me the result of the voting for the first three days. I used $20,000 in my own private affairs at Buffalo.

Bangs—How did you expend it?

Tillinghast—I decline to answer further unless it is really necessary.

Bangs—How did you expend it?

Tillinghast—Don't think I should disclose my private affairs, but as you seem to desire it particularly, I will state that I deposited the money in a bank in Buffalo where I do business.

To Brooks—I meant to use $20,000 in a real estate transaction, but did not, because I was absent and could not complete the transactions.

To Bangs—Deposited the money in the Bank of Buffalo: don't think there were any $500 bills in the package of $20,000 received from Graves.

To Carpenter—Called on my friend Graves of Spencer, Trask & Co. two or three times.

Q.—Why not use checks for $20,000?

A.—I preferred to bring currency with me to Buffalo from Albany.

Q.—Do you know a man named Churchyard at Buffalo?

A.—I do; don't know that he had any claim against the Central Railroad: never paid him a dollar; used that $20,000, and more, in my own private business matters while in Buffalo and Michigan.

Bangs—Do you know any other person who is a candidate for United States Senator besides Depew who as acted as counsel or attorney for the New York Central Railroad?

Answer—Yes, sir.

Bangs—Who is he?

Tellinghaust—Roscoe Conkling, in a case at Canandaigua, some three or four years ago.

To Skinner—Mr. Platt is an official of the Southern Central Road.

Charles P. Ingersoll of Westfield sworn—Have been in Albany during the past four weeks in the interest of Administration men. Prefer Depew to any other candidate. Have known Senator Sessions four or five years. Have known Bradley since January last. Have conversed with him on the Senatorial question. Up to June 8 I had talked with Bradley and on that day supposed he would vote for Depew. Never paid him any money. Saw no one pay him any money, nor no money in Bradley's possession. Saw Session that afternoon before tea time at his room. Told Sessions of the conversation with Bradley that afternoon; also told him what Terry had told me of the feeling among our people on the Senatorial question. Our conversation occurred in Session's room in the Kenmore Hotel; don't remember seeing Bradley again that evening after I left Session's room. Bradley told me in the afternoon he understood his constituents strongly opposed Conkling and Platt, and that he had got through voting for them, and would vote thereafter for Depew.

Cross-examined by Peckham—Told Sessions in his room the substance of my conversation with Bradley. Mr. Hudson came into Session's room and this interrupted further conversation about Bradley.

Bangs to Smith—We have no further witnesses to call, and as far as present advised we are through.

John I. Davenport, sworn—I saw in the papers Saturday last the statement of Senator Strahan's relative to the offer of the Marshalship of New York.

As the statement reflected on President Garfield and myself, I communicated with the President, and received a reply that I might state what took place between us. A similar request was sent Postmaster General James, asking his permission to state what passed between them about the Marshalship. A similar request was made to Mr. Knox, and his permission was received to the conversation with him. I went to Washington in May to see about a case wherein I had been retained. At the breakfast table in Willard's Hotel, Washington, the question of the Marshalship was brought up and the names of Hugh Gardner and Col. Ehrhardt were mentioned in connection therewith.

After breakfast I went to the White House, the Postmaster-General being present with me. The President asked me who would be a good man for the office of Marshal in New York. I replied I could not say. He asked me how about Mr. Knox? I said his appointment would an excellent one. The President asked me to see Knox at Arlington. I did so and talked an hour with him, but Knox insisted he did not want it. He had no acquaintance with politics and feared it would interfere with his professional business. Finding him unwilling to accept, it Judge Gardner's and Col. Erhardt's names were again brought up followed by my suggesting Senator Strahan's name. I went back to the White House, and found the President busily engaged, but he came out in the library, and after telling him about the refusal of Knox I mentioned Strahan's name, but the President did not know him. I went back to Knox, and after talking a while I sent that telegram to Senator Strahan and came on to New York. I met Strahan at the Union League Club that night and asked him if I could use his name far the office of Marshalship? Strahan said: "Do you know whether Conkling and Platt are to be candidates?" I answered I did not. He then asked me, "Where are you in this fight?" I answered, "In this issue I am with the President." He said: I don't know whether either gentleman will be a candidate, but I don't like to be embarrassed. He asked if this offer could be held over till after the settlement of the United States Senatorship. I replied, "No, I must have an answer immediately." I told him that of course he would be expected to vote against Conkling and Platt. He wanted to consult with Judge Gardner that night and give me an answer in the morning. I agreed to this, and in the morning he telegraphed he would not accept the place. I received a telegram about 2 o'clock that morning from Henry E. Knox at Washington, asking me to suggest some name if Strahan would not accept. Here the committee took a recess.

The Star Route Charges.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—General Brady, through his counsel, Shellabarger and Wilson, to-day made application before the Court, Judge Cox presiding, for an immediate investigation by the Grand Jury of the Star Route charges. It was stated on behalf of Brady that he has been subject to bitter assaults from the press for months; that Government agents are represented as taking evidence against him and newspapers are continually filled with charges against him; that it was stated the Grand Jury just impaneled would take up and investigate these charges, and now it is announced that the whole matter will be postponed till September. Brady claimed the privilege under the law of a prompt and speedy trial and asked the Court to direct the Grand Jury to investigate the charges immediately. Col. Cook, special counsel in the Star Route cases, made a speech, saying the evidence is not yet ready for submission to the Grand Jury; that not a single case is yet complete and to go before the Grand Jury in the present condition the case would be a complete failure. He said the cases are being made up and evidence collected as fast as possible but it will be several weeks at least before any case is called complete. Cook spoke of the importance of the cases and charges and said there was no intention of persecution, but the government means to clear itself of all responsibility if there was wrong. He said the charges of wrong extended to Texas and up the country to Oregon, all over the Western border, and it might be necessary to call witnesses from these far distant sections. The Court held that it could not expedite matters by hastening the Grand Jury investigation before the prosecution is ready, and so all the Star Route cases cases finally go over until September, and the present Grand Jury will be allowed a recess until then.

The Readjusters.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 23.—The plans of the Virginia coalitionists are being mainly formulated here in Washington. Lewis, the nominee of the Republican ticket, claims he is still chairman of the Republican State Central Committee of Virginia, and he and others of the committee who favor a coalition claim that the meeting of the committee for the 4th inst. will be the only legal meeting, and it is their purpose to fill the place of Wickham and other Straightouts on the committee with new men who favor the coalition. The indications now are that there will be two separate committees—that of the Straightouts, headed by Wickham, and the Coalitionists, headed by Lewis, and Lewis will insist that his is the regular committee. Lewis' committee will take such action as is calculated to help the coalition, expecting to thus divide the Republican party. Senator Dawes has written a letter to Virginia, earnestly advising the Republicans to join with the Readjusters, and a similar letter from other prominent Republicans will be presented on the 28th. Wickham and the straightouts have a majority of the committee as it now stands. even Lewis will not be recognized as chairman, and he will then call the committee to meet at some other place than the one designated, and it is this that induces a division of the committees. Senator Mahone still controls the appointment of small postmasters in Virginia. Citizens of Falls Church met recently and designated a Republican for postmaster. Mahone apposed him and he could not get the appointment. After awhile the citizens were informed that they must submit a man whom Mahone would approve, and when this was done that man was appointed.

President Garfield.

LONG BRANCH, June 23.—President Garfield reviewed the Seventh Regiment of Veterans this morning. He then went to the Ocean Hotel, where he was accorded a reception by the Pennsylvania editors. He was introduced by President Chalfont of the Association. The President announced that having only a few moments to spare, on account of a previous engagement, it would give him pleasure to shake hands with all the editors and their wives. After this shaking of hands, the President left for the Seventh Regiment Veteran dinner.

THE ITALIAN LOAN.

LONDON, June 23.—Most of the financial articles in the morning papers state until the relations between France and Italy become more satisfactory the difficulties attending the attempt to place a loan on the Paris market will be practically insurmountable. PARIS, June 23.—The feeling between Frenchmen and Italians grows worse hourly. Several breaches of the peace took place here last night. Several provincial towns report like disturbances

At Marseilles everything is quiet and no further trouble is apprehended. Speculators and operators of the Stock Exchange have made the most of the Marseilles incident to knock down the market and produce a miniature panic in French and Italian securities.

Germany.

BERLIN, June 23.—The National Zeitung commenting on the recent circular of Barthelomy St. Hilaire, the French Minister of Foreign Affairs, to the representatives of France abroad setting forth the foreign policy of France, says the French consale themselves for their vast expenditure by the idea they are financially starving out Germany, which is a delusion. America only is profiting by this war in peace, for which French agriculturalists are paying dearly.

Discovery of Another Comet.

ROCHESTER, June 23.—Two simultaneous dispatches were received by Professor Swift, of the Warner Observatory, by which it appears another great comet has been discovered. Professor Harpless, Haverford College, Pennsylvania, states that Edwards saw it with the naked eye this morning, and Edgar L. Larkin, New Windsor, Ill., also reports seeing it, and that it is a vast new comet, is located in the constellation "Auriga," about eight degrees of Capella, and it is not improbable it may be the much expected comet of 1812, which should appear not far from that locality. There is some question as to who has the honor of the discovery, and the Warner prize of $200 belong to Larkin or Edwards.

They are Still Defiant—Sleep and Eat Heartily—Gov. Crittenden Has Not Yet Interfered.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MARYVILLE, MO., June 23.—We are in the midst of a terrible excitement. Rumors are flying thick and fast. The friends of the condemned are battling against hope. Telegram after telegram is still being sent to the Governor. One prominent witness for the prosecution says he was offered $1,000 last week to contradict his testimony, The Talbott boys yesterday afternoon deeded their interest in the estate to an attorney of this city if he would get a statement from Wyatt the accomplice who turned States' evidence that he had swore falsely. Some statement of this kind was sent to the Governor. How strong is not known.

STILL DEFIANT.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MARYVILLE, June 23.—Your reporter had an interview with the boys late last evening. He found them bearing up wonderfully and defiant. Albert complained bitterly of the prejudice against them and said they had been continually misrepresented by the press. Both asserted their innocence of the crime and said they were the victims of a conspiracy. Time would vindicate them, They had nothing new to offer. Albert was writing and laughingly called for more ink. Both of them slept well during the night and eat as hearty a breakfast as usual. At present no one is permitted to see them and they have been placed in separate cells. All hope is now over and the town is more quiet.

GABE TUCKER'S VIEWS.

You may notch it on de palin's as a mighty resky plan.
To make your judgment by de clo'es dat kivers up a man;
For I hardly needs to tell you how you often cumes ercross
A fifty-dollar saddle on a twenty-dollar hoss.
An', wukin' in de low-groun's, you diskiver as you go,
Dat de fines' shuck may hide de meanes' nubbin in a row!

I think a man has got a mighty slender chance for heben
Dat holds on to his piety but one day out ob seben;
Dat talks about de sinners wid a heap o'solemn chat
An' nebber draps a nickel in de missionary hat;
Dat's foremost in de meetin' house for raisin' all de chunes,
But lays aside his 'ligion wid his Sunday pantaloons!

I nebber judge o' people dat I meets along de way
By de places whar dey come fum an' de houses whar dey stay;
For de bantam chickens awful fond o' roostin' pretty high,
An' de turkey-buzzard sails above de eagle in de sky,
Dey ketches little minners in de middle ob de sea,
An' you finds de smalles' possum up de bigges' kind o' tree!

WORLDLY PROGRESS.

Stevenson's First Locomotive—Boxing Up Electricity.

From M. D. Conway's London Letter.

To-day England is witnessing two festal affairs of imposing dimensions which have a certain relation by contrast with each other. One is the celebration of the centenary of George Stevenson's birth at Newcastle-upon-Tyne; the other is "ye old English Fayre" at the Royal Albert Hall in London. The Fair is a grand masquerade of the olden time in which many of the prettiest and most eminent ladies in London may be seen, dressed up in the style of their great great-grandmothers, or costumes farther back, framed in an array of mediæval villages, booths and other paraphernalia. It is one of the most wonderful scenes which this metropolis has ever seen, and pretty much the whole metropolis is crowded into the big building, there packed like sardines in a box. The migration of English society out of the habitat artificially restored to Albert Hall makes it seem almost prehistoric, and the migration has been largely made on that railway which George Stevenson started in October, 1825, between Darlington and Stockton. The humble lad who worked as a collier's pit-boy on one shilling a week, and who was eighteen years of age before he learned to read, became the revolutionizer of the world. He was declared in the House of Commons to be a knave and an imposter. He was next forced to pledge himself that his engines should only run ten miles an hour. When the hateful thing came from the provinces to this neighborhood, and it was proposed at the bar mess that they should go out to Croydon by train, instead of posting by carriages, it was bitterly opposed as beneath the dignity of the bar; and, when the reformers gained a majority, the conservatives left the room, among them Sir Frederic Thesiger, afterwards Lord Chancellor, and the late Russell Gurney, Recorder of London.

When Stevenson first looked upon his train moving so stately and softly he cried: "It is drawn by Light." Sunlight that had garnered itself for untold ages in black subterranean rock did indeed draw that train, but Stevenson could not foresee the immense amount of light that it was drawing after it. And now his centenary is celebrated by a discovery which may throw even his vast work into the shade. To-day Sir William Thomson announces some of the prospects which wait on a little box which was recently carried from Paris to Glasgow. This box is about one cubic foot in size, and in it was stored up a million of foot pounds of electricity. When Franklin bottled the lightning the pulpit took alarm. This daring American revolutionist, not content with snatching scepters from kings, was actually seizing the thunderbolts of the King of Kings. Divines prophesied that Jehovah would certainly fulminate His wrath upon this arrogance as He did once upon the builders of a heaven-reaching tower. But now the world has got so used to that kind of Promethean defiance of celestial thunderers that no warning voice is uplifted against this passage of a boxed up thunderstorm from Paris to Glasgow. It was a tender-hearted storm. It had force enough to have shattered steeples and towers on its path, but it had been converted; a work of grace had been wrought in its heart; it was as gentle as a lamb. It had left off serving Indra, Jove & Co.—will go no more on their wild and desolating messages. It is already humanized and bringing forth fruits meet for repentance. A few days ago Prof. George Buchanan borrowed of Sir William Thomson one of its cells, weighing about 18 pounds, and by it ignited the thick platinum wire of a galvanic ecraseur, and bloodlessly removed a nævoid tumor from a boy's tongue in one minute. Without it the operation would have required ten minutes. The many practical services anticipated by Sir William Thomson from his obedient Afreet, who remains sealed up in his casket while exerting various force, awakens even the Times to poetry. Some few years ago Cassandra voices were heard prophesying that by a certain period the coal fields of England would be exhausted, and then where would England be? Where her manufacturing and maritime supremacy? The Times speculates on a period in the near future, when these "black diamonds" may be of merely historical interest. "We believe," it says, "it was Sir William Thomson himself who once spoke of Niagara as the natural and proper chief motor for the whole of the North American Continent; and it now seems quite within the bounds of possibility that persons who are now living may witness the application of this chief motor to the indicated uses." It foresees an uncontaminated London atmosphere; flowers and fruits flourishing in town gardens; diseases put to flight; the general curse removed! Charles Dickens should have lived to read this roseate prognostication in the Times. I believe it is in "Our Mutual Friend" that the poor little woman of Houndsditch invites her friend to "come up and be dead," meaning an ascent to an imaginary parterre of flowers on the housetop; a paradise which her friend never ventured to test. But if the promise of this box of electricity be kept the Houndsditch wilderness may blossom as a rose.

The German Players in London.

M. D. Conway's Letter to Cincinnati Commercial.

There is a good deal of disappointment here at the performances of the Meinigen Company. The expectations of the public has been pitched too high. Their acting is of a kind which has for some time been considered old-fashioned in England. In fact it is pedantic; that is, the actors seem to be going through their parts just as they were taught them, and as their predecessors were taught them, without mingling with their tones or gestures much that can be connected with any invention of their own. Some of them move about as if they had been previously wound up. There is not much room for failure, it is true, in this kind of acting, but neither is there any room for the fine touches and effects which come of spontaneity. Their deficiencies I thought painfully apparent in Schiller's "Robbers." That old play was placed under a ban in this country from the first. A broken-down scamp in Germany became a thief, and his friends threw the blame on Schiller's tragedy. It was supposed here that anybody who witnessed the tragedy would be likely to turn cutthroat at once. The principal highwayman, Karl von Moore, as he was represented here on Monday, was certainly harmless in that direction. Partly through the mutilations of the text, partly through his woodenness, the impression was by no means of a fascinating character. Amelia was a whimpering sort of character. The brigands were good as symphonies in red and nocturnes in yellow, but they were very noisy for gentlemen. Germany has beaten France in the battlefield, but on the stage the Meiningen folk could not stand against the Comedie Francaise a minute, and must even surrender to the Gymnase Company now playing here.

TIN WEDDING PRESENTS.

Odd But Popular Fruits of the Late Mr. Musgrove's Fancy.

From the New York Sun.

The inventor who began to make tin wedding presents by wholesale died in this city recently. He was born in London, and for many years carried on a wholesale flower business in Liverpool. Then he went into the tinware business in this city, in Forty-first street, near Ninth avenue. Although Mr. Musgrove had become a practical tinner, yet he remained a scientific florist at heart, and one day it occurred to him that he might bring flowers and tin together by making tin boquets for tin weddings. He wisely chose such flowers for the purpose as are remarkable for pretty shapes rather than for color. Marigolds and asters, field daisies and buttercups, calla and tiger lilies and tulips, camelias, and roses were imitated faithfully, even to their stamens and pistils; but orchids, fuchsias and begonias were too complicated in structure to be taken as patterns, while forget-me-nots, mignonette and lilies of the valley were too delicate to be thought of for a moment. The arrangement of the tin flowers in a bouquet was after the manner of natural flowers, and the inventor conceived the happy notion of constructing a little tank in the tulip that crowned the bouquet, in which such perfumes as new-mown hay, heliotrope, japonica or violet might be carried, so that their fragrance should be dispensed by the wedding guest who carried the tin flowers.

Rival tinners in this city openly declared that the inventor was a vaporing sentimentalist. At tin weddings, they asked, had not the presents always been of kitchen ware, useful and not ornamental? Why, then, try to get up mock fancy articles? But Mr. Musgrove replied that everybody liked fun at a wedding, and that he believed he could help it along. Common kitchen utensils which had been presented at the wedding, he added, are soon mixed up with the "boughten" wares, and thus the precious fact that they were presents from dear friends is lost to mind. Quaint and fanciful articles made from tin would be preserved as souvenirs.

So from time to time Mr. Musgrove invented new articles of tin suitable for tin weddings. His sons, who succeeded to his business, now proudly exhibit a great glass case in the most conspicuous place in their manufactory. It is filled with gleaming samples of the curious wares. The designs number eighty. Among the most curious are baskets of tin flowers, hand and buttonhole bouquets, such musical instruments as banjos, cornets, drums, trumpets, fifes, flutes and violins; tin wheelbarrows and schooners three feet long, with belying tin sails; coal hods, flatirons, hatchets and hand saws, fog horns five feet long, walking sticks, cradles, watches and chains such as Eph Horn used to wear on the minstrel stage, wedding cards, writing desks, brooches and breastpins, women's belts and sandal boots, fans, bracelets and feathers, earrings and epaulets, brushes and combs, chains and crosses, crowns and coronets, finger rings and sleeve buttons, spectacles, slippers and neckties, lockets and chains, napkin rings, pitchers, cake baskets and card baskets, egg cups, birds, bells, knives and forks, quill pens, razors in a case, rolling pins and sugar tongs, spoons and cakes. The cakes are made to represent a wedding cake, and a bunch of tin flowers is soldered to the top. The cake, however, has no bottom, and it can be used to cover a genuine wedding cake. The most striking objects simulated in tinware are a man's silk hat and a woman's English walking hat. On one side of the hat is a wreath of tin flowers, while on the opposite side of the crown waves a tin feather. Two ribbons of tin hang down at an angle of 44° behind, and in front is a tin pompon.

"Do wealthy people buy these things?" one of the firm was asked yesterday.

"Yes; they are the only people who do buy them," he replied.

"How far do you send them?"

"That lady's hat is to be sent to-morrow to Rio de Janeiro. We deal with tinners all over the country."

"When is the demand greatest?"

"In the fall. That is the time when the largest number of weddings, and therefore of wedding anniversaries, take place. The traffic in these wares is growing all the while."

The Abuse of Quinine.

A Physician in the Chicago Tribune.

For many years I have felt it my duty as a physician to protest against the growing abuse of quinine, and to warn the public against its dangers. I have so far refrained because I feared the public and the medical profession might think I was unduly prejudiced on account of my connection with the homœpathic school of medicine. But let me say that I am not one of those who reject the use of quinine. On the contrary, I consider it a valuable and useful drug. It is the abuse of it, and not its legitimate use, that I protest against. For the last five years, especially, its abuse by the profession and the laity has yearly assumed dangerous proportions. It is the medical fashion of the day, as much so as was the use of antimony and mercury during the last century. This fashion is rapidly tending to an extreme, which must sooner or later result in a reaction which will be tremendous, just as all reactions from abuse are. The reaction against antimony and mercury has nearly banished them from practice, and really excluded them when they ought to be used. So it will be with quinine. It ought to be known that quinine is as much a poison in over-doses as arsenic. In massive doses it will cause all the phenomena of collapse, pernicious congestions and serious lesions of the brain. In agues it often substitutes its own poisonous effects for that of the disease, and the ignorant physician goes on giving the drug without recognizing the fact. It often precipitates attacks of apoplexy, mania and insanity, which milder treatment could ward off. The immense doses which are given in cerebro-spinal fevers often drag the patient to a rapidly fatal end. Dr. W. A. Hammond, in a private letter to the writer, declares it is a potent cause of congestion of the brain and should be used with great caution. The medical superintendent of one of the insane asylums in this State declared to a friend of mine that, in a large proportion of the insane which came under his care, that condition had been caused or aggravated by the improper use of quinine. In my own personal experience I can point to hundreds of persons in Chicago who have been irreparably injured by this drug. One notorious irregular practitioner gives it in enormous doses for nearly every complaint; and, not content with its internal use, orders it rubbed into the skin, mixed with lard, by the ounce. The victims to this unwarrantable treatment can be numbered by hundreds, and its deleterious effects will follow them for years. There is a worse aspect, however, than its occasional abuse. I allude to its continued use. When a person has been subjected to its abuse for a length of time, he cannot leave it off; he becomes a confirmed quinine eater, and in the end his condition becomes as deplorable as that of an opium eater. I have at this time ventured on this protest because I find that the regular profession are beginning to wake up to the knowledge of the abuse of quinine, and are bold enough to denounce it.

Cincinnati Buying Pictures.

Cincinnati Dispath to N. Y. Times, June 18.

Mr. Joseph Longworth, for the Art Museum trustees, has sent a cable dispatch to a friend in Europe authorizing the purchase of all of Lessing's paintings, now catalogued for sale. The trustees are in a position to proceed actively in the work of establishing a museum. The subscriptions, which amount to upward of $300,000, have been nearly all paid in, and additional subscriptions can easily be secured when wanted. A site has been selected and plans for buildings and grounds are being considered. The Lessing collection is held at 40,000 marks, about $10,000. The prospect of securing these paintings for the museum causes great satisfaction to all interested in art.

THE GARFIELDS.

How the President Enjoys Himself at the Refreshing Sea Shore.

Long Branch Special to N. Y. Herald.

The quiet and repose which the President sought in coming to Long Branch he has certainly found at the Elberon Hotel. Since his arrival here on Saturday evening he has not left his quarters for more than a couple of hours, except to attend church on Sunday. The politicians have left him severely alone, and the only sound that comes to him is the long roar of the ocean as it breaks on the beach a few hundred feet away from his windows. This is infinitely sweeter than the roar of the Ohio politicians clamoring for office in the Executive Mansion. I have said that with the exception of the church business he has been out of his rooms for only a few hours. These have been stolen from the night. When the hotel was closed last evening and the pleasant, breezy verandahs were deserted, the President took a quiet stroll down to the bluffs, accompanied by Colonel Rockwell, and listened to the murmuring of the "sad sea waves." It must have been a relief. What they whispered to him no one of course can tell. They may have conveyed a message from Albany, or from Charley Foster, who, according to all accounts, is not in a particularly comfortable position at the present time. Probably they sang him a stalwart song.

The notice which the organs have served on the political mob that their attendance would be considered an intrusion seems to have the desired effect so far as their presence, or rather their absence, is concerned. Not a solitary Half-Breed has put in an appearance, and the "bouncing, bounding Davenport, who at least was expected down to-day, did not arrive. The Long Branch cottagers who would of course be glad to honor the President in every possible way have respected his wishes to be let alone and remained away with remarkaable unanimity. Probably they are overdoing the thing, for the situation is positively dull. Colonel Jones, who conducts the Elberon establishment with all its outlying cordon of cottages, in a style that is the perfection of hotel art, has paid the President the compliment of hanging out a handsome silk flag over the main entrance of his old English classic building, the first time in the history of the Elberon settlement that such a thing has been done.

It is commented on as a curious fact that Mr. Jesse Grant, who has one of the Elberon cottages, and who practically lives in the hotel, has not yet left even his card. General Horace Porter, who resides across the Ocean Drive a few hundred feet from the hotel, has been doing all the hospitalities so far as calling is concerned. General Porter and the President served together on the ssaff of General Rosecrans during a portion of the war. The notable visitor to-day has been Secretary of War Lincoln, who came down this afternoon with General Porter, and who is his guest. Mr. Lincoln had a very long interview with the President this evening. The only other notable callers were Senator Milier, of California, who arrived early in the morning, almost before breakfast was over; Congressman Townsend, of Cleveland, Ohio, and Mr. Kelsey, the Secretary of the State of New Jersey, accompanied by one Henry C. Little. Mr. Kelsey was not admitted. Mr. Townsend was, of course, more fortunate. The Ohio man is not in the habit of being denied anything he asks or wants, and Mr. Townsend, being an old friend and "chum," and having probably important, perhaps unencouraging, if not disheartening, news to communicate, had an extended interview. Sam Ward was also on hand. The king of the lobby could not of course be denied. Mr. Ward is one of the most fascinating of men socially, politically and otherwise, and when his card is sent to any of our public men, Judges of the Supreme Court, officers of the Cabinet, United States Senators and even Presidents, the bell boy generally brings back word to show him up. Sam was, of course, shown up. Two Jerseymen from Paterson were among the next who came. Their cards read James Angus and A. Ansbock, of Paterson.

The man who has shaken hands with ever so many Presidents turned up in the person of a loquacious old chap from New York. He rejoices in the name of G. Binney, of New York. Binney communicated the intelligence to all who cared to hear it, that he had spent $30 to go to Washington to shake the temperance hand of ex-President Hayes. I am sorry to say that Binney was turned away, and that his excursion ticket was a bad investment.

Mrs. Garfield's health has very greatly improved since her arrival here. She has so far recovered that she was able to walk to the beach this afternoon. When the President will leave here is still undetermined. He may go within this week or remain until the next. His sole object in coming here was to secure a change of air for Mrs. Garfield and to obtain relaxation from the cares of office. The politicians are not expected and are not wanted. But the situation is rather blue.

TO LOOK AT THE SUN.

An Expedition to Ascertain Whether He is Not Really Blue.

From the N. Y. Times, June 19.

Prof. S. P. Langley, Director of the Allegheny Observatory, famous in the line of discovery in solar physics, is about starting on an expedition of scientific and popular interest. The main object of this expedition is to determine by actual experiment the amount of heat given by the sun to the earth. Numerous questions of importance to meteorology are closely involved in this inquiry, and hence it has a direct practical bearing. A liberal citizen of Pittsburg, Pa., who wishes that his name should not be made public, has defrayed the large cost of the requisite apparatus and also of the incidental expenses of the expedition. The co-operation and hearty assistance of Gen. Hazen, Chief of the Signal Service Bureau, has been given to this enterprise, and it proceeds under this official direction. To attain its special object the expedition must seek one of the most elevated summits on the continent, in an extreme arid region, these two conditions being essential. These are only to be found combined in the remote localities of Arizona and Southern California, in places far from civilization, and where the aid of the Government by the War Department is indispensible both to provide transportation and protection. One of the objects of the expedition will be to prove by a new class of experiments a curious conclusion which Prof. Langley has already arrived at, to the effect that the sun is not really white, or yellow, or even a red object; but that sunlight is in reality "deeply, darkly, beautifully blue." We, however, see sunlight only through the delusive medium of an atmosphere. We are in the position of people who have been looking through colored spectacles without knowing it. If we had always looked at the electric light in this way—say throuth yellow glasses—we should have believed it yellow. The proof that we have a blue sun is, however, somewhat conclusive at present, and this expedition is likely to add to the strength of the proof. This is not merely a subject of curious inquiry. If our atmosphere in reality has played the part of yellow glasses, it follows that an enormous proportion of the sun's heat has never been taken into account in those questions of scientific meteorology which have a special bearing on climate, and hence upon agricultural and other practical affairs. Two adjacent stations will be selected, respectively at heights of 1,000 and 14,000 feet for the purposes of comparison, through their very different thickness of atmosphere. The personnel of the expedition will includet at least six specialists, of whom one will be an officer from the army, three from civil life, and two non-commissioned officers of the Signal Service. The expeditions start July 1, from Pittsburg.

A Sensational Suicide.

Auburn, (N. Y.,) Special to the Cincinnati Gazette.

The suicide of Edward S. Fearing has created a lively sensation here to-day. He was the son of Mr. C. N. Fearing, a wealthy resident of New York City, and came here eight years ago to take a position with the Auburn Woolen Mill Company, of which his father was President. He was young, handsome, and intelligent, and at once entered into the best society. It was not long before his fondness for the wine cup became known, however, and soon his dissolute habits debarred him from good society. He lost his lucrative position at the mill, but was granted a liberal allowance by his father. His next step was to form a mesalliance and his downfall was hastened. Lately various persons have been annoyed by scurrilous anonymous letters, and a correspondent of a Syracuse paper charged him with being connected with their authorship. This seemed to be the last straw, and he felt very badly, claiming that he had been wrongfully accused. The feeling of shame and melancholy grew upon him so forcibly that last night he procured a bottle of morphine and swallowed a deadly dose. Two physicians were summoned by his wife, but no effort could stay the poison's work. He expired at 4 a. m., almost his last words being: "I did not write those letters!" He left a note to his father, in which he used the expression. "You will now see that I am not the coward you thought." This is supposed to be a reference to his last conversation with his father, in which it is reported the latter told him he would have shot himself long ago if he had not been a coward. He certainly has been a sad burden to his family. He was thirty-two years of age.

IT'S IRIDIUM!

What Electric Light Experimenters Have Been Looking For.

From the Cincinnati Gazette, 22d.

Much has been said and written concerning that gas exterminating invention the electric light, and the matter is one in which many men of science are interested. Hence a relation of the facts concerning any new discovery is hailed with interest and read with avidity. It was principally the latter reason, aside from his own curiosity in the matter, that led a Gazette reporter to visit Mr. John Holland's jewelry store, West Fourth street, last night to see the working of what is known as the iridium electric lamp, which was then being first exhibited to the public, or at least that portion which either business or the pleasure of an evening promenade called to that favored thoroughfare.

The iridium lamp differs only in one respect from the Maxim lamp now in use in front of the Florentine Hotel, but in the end the difference is a vast one. In the electric lamp in use up to the present time both the positive and negative electrodes are of carbon, which, while being a very poor conductor of the electric current, is likewise susceptible to heat, burning away very fast under the intense heat induced by the tremendous current passing through it when the machine is in operation. In the iridium lamp the positive electrode is of carbon and the negative of iridium. The way in which it came to attract attention was as follows: Mr. John Holland was engaged for a number of years in experimenting to find some method by which he might be enabled to fuse iridium. After a long time he was successful in his efforts; but it was found that the composition, as it then was, would melt readily, owing to the amount of phosphorus it had retained from the fusing process. At that juncture Prof. Dudley, of the Ohio Medical College, took the matter in hand to see if, by some process, he could not separate the phosphorus and iridum, making it again non-fusible and prepared for use. The means by which he attained his end were fully set forth in a lecture which he delivered, and which was published in the Gazette at the time.

While the above good work was going on, experiments with the electric light were being made in the Ohio Medical College, wherein an attempt was made to substitute platinum for the negative carbon electrode, but was found to melt too readily to be of any lasting use. The attention of Mr. W. M. Thomas, a young photographer in the gallery of Van Loo, who for a number of years past had been attracted to the platinum researches, was directed to these experiments, and the question at once arose in his mind, why not try iridium? With that end in view he sought Prof. Dudley, and asked him for a small piece of the metal, which was given him, and he departed, only to return in a short time with a statement of what he had found, and the two went to work together, Mr. Sam. Skinner also giving his assistance, and the iridium lamps are the result.

In conversation with Prof. Dudley he stated that they were experimenting in their shop where the steam pressure only gave their machine an impetus of 900 revolutions per minute. With both positive and negative electrodes of carbon they obtained no light at all, but that immediately the carbon point gave place to the iridium a light of several hundred candle power was obtained. And why? As before stated carbon is a poor conductor, and a powerful current must be induced to have any effect at all. On the contrary, iridium gives free passage to the current, in that way saving at least forty per cent of electricity, and it is claimed that with the same amount of power seven iridium lamps can be used where by the old way the current will feed only five. Indeed, some enthusiastic scientists claim double the number of iridium lamps for the same power, but Prof. Dudley is modest, and says that he divided it seven to five in favor of the new light. The iridium point is indestructible, whereby a great expense is saved. But the most important point is this: The point of light always remains in the same place, making what is known as a focusing lamp, and can be used with a reflector without the use of additional and intricate machinery. That is, in the carbon lamp, as the negative pole which is below, burns off, and consequently sinks down, it is followed by the positive pole, which is above, so that if used on a headlight, the effectiveness of the reflector would be soon lost. In the new lamp, however, the negative iridium pole is stationary, and the positive pole, as it burns off, falls continually down. In order to obtain a stationary or focusing light in the old lamp it was necessary to construct clockwork machinery, which constantly pushed the negative pole to its place. There is also a decided difference in the light, the new having none of that peculiar blue tinge, and is besides much softer to the eye. Nor does it flicker and flare like the old light. The new improvement is certainly a gigantic stride toward perfection. The same machine is employed in producing the current as was used with the old lamp.

Indians That Work.

From the New York Tribune.

One of the contractors on the California Southern Railroad is reported to be employing Indians with satisfactory results. This is practically a new experiment, although for more than a century Indian labor has been occasionally resorted to on the Pacific Coast, chiefly in agricultural occupations at points where the services of white men were not to be obtained. It is, besides, an interesting and hopeful experiment, for it may be predicted with a reasonable degree of assurance that, as a means of civilizing the Indian, daily and systematic work for which he is promptly paid and to the faithful performance of which he is strictly held, will accomplish more than treaties and training schools. Hitherto within the narrow limits which have prescribed his employment the Indian has been a reasonably efficient worker. The early mission buildings of California were built by the aborigines, they helped to plant and cultivate the vineyards in that region, and they are still employed to a considerable extent in the vineyards of Southern California.

Inventive Genius.

From the New York Times.

The dog that is lodged on a shelving rock at Niagara, from which escape, unaided, is impossible, is a grand subject for inspiration to inventors all over the country, and many plans for his rescue have been offered. One is to slipnoose him; a second, to catch him with a fishhook; and a third, to let down a basket containing some meat, into which the dog will get and be drawn up safely—if he has good sense; while, if he jumps out and is lost it will be evident that he was not worth saving. The plan having the merit of the boldest originality is to lower down another bull-pup, well secured by a rope; the two will clinch, and, as bull-dogs never let go, both will be drawn up safely to the sound of vivacious music.

WASHINGTON SCANDAL.

Attaches of the French and Spanish Legations in a Tight Box.

From the Washington Republican, 21st.

"For some time past a young Secretary of one of the Foreign Legations has been persistently and systematically snubbed by the members of one of the largest and best-known clubs in the city, of which he is a member. He is young, attractive-looking and of easy and affable manners. A good address, a well-informed mind, and a gay vivacity of manner constitute qualities which enabled him to achieve social success, and became the center of his immediate social circle. The young foreigner had all these qualities, and, in addition, he had shown a great eagerness to become acquainted with the members of the club, and mingle in their conversation and pleasures. But in spite of all this he made no headway. Whenever he has joined a circle no recognition has been taken of his presence, and all his attempts to join in the conversation have been coldly ignored. When he has invited any one to join him in a game of any kind, he has always met with a refusal, and no invitation of a similar character has been extended to him. While he is a member of a large club, and constantly meets many people in the club-room, yet, as far as any social intercourse was concerned, he might as well be on Robinson Crusoe's desert island. The situation is the more noticeable, as when he first entered the club he received many attentions from the membesr and made many pleasant acquaintances. But all at once a change took place, and he found himself as completely ignored and shunned as if he had been a small-pox patient.

"The cause which led to this treatment involves one of the liveliest scandals which has ever agitated social circles in this city. The circumstances have been the subject of gossip in the clubs and in the West End for some time. It seems that in the latter part of the social season a splendid reception was given at the hospitable residence of one of the most respected and best known of our citizens. The reception was largely attended, but the number of invitations was limited, and as a result the spacious parlors were thronged with the very elite of our brilliant society. It was a decidedly swell affair, and was generally mentioned as one of the most brilliant entertainments given during this season. The young foreign secretary was among the favored ones present, accompanied by a friend, who was also an attache of one of the Legations. These gay young blades kept together during the evening and confined their attentions almost exclusively to a young lady who has always been prominent as well as a favorite in society circles. They escorted her to the refreshment table, and after the other guests had returned up stairs this party remained, talking gaily together, until they were the only ones in the supper room. When the coast was thus clear the foreigners began to ply the young lady with wine, and in a short time she was greatly under the influence of the stimulating beverage, of which she had partaken more freely than usual. After they had succeeded in getting her into this condition they took her upstairs to one of the dressing-rooms, where they remained together some time. They were subsequently seen to escort the young lady down stairs to her carriage, and she was driven to her home.

"Their strange conduct had not been unobserved, and curiosity was aroused to know what it all meant. There was a good deal of talk about it, and finally the dainty sons of a foreign clime were asked to explain their strange proceeding. They seemed to regard the entire affair as a good joke, and, without making any direct denial of the reflections which their conduct cast upon the character of the young lady, they allowed the worst inferences to be made. They did more than this. They began to boast of the affair, and make various insinuations of a most unpleasant character. Shortly after the young lady left the city, and nothing has been heard of her since. Among those not cognizant of the facts nothing was known of their meaning, except that which was gathered from the slurs and inuendoes of the foreigners. It was a delicate matter to make inquiries about, but the members of the club concluded that, whatever were the true facts, the conduct of these men was by no means that of gentlemen, and they determined to unite in totally ignoring them. The consequence is, that the one who happened to be a member of the club has been as completely snubbed and ostracised as it is possible for a man to be. This unfortunate affair has been the subject of a considerable amount of gossip, and future developments are looked for with a great deal of interest."

The Barefooted of New Jersey.

From the Essex County Press.

In violation of the customs of Bloomfield society, my children go barefooted all through the summer and early autumn. Probably I should not want them to go without shoes and stockings for lack of money to buy them, but if I owned all the railroad stock of Jay Gould and Vanderbilt combined they would go barefooted just the same; and possibly, in that case, they would not be the only ones in the family to avail themselves of that health-giving privilege. I believe most firmly that their health is greatly augmented by this practice. If they wear shoes and stockings they must stay in the house all through these beautiful, long, dewy mornings, or go with wet shoes and stockings, or else wear rubber overshoes that confine the perspiration from the soles of the feet, which in summer is very profuse.

Either of these alternatives, one can see, by a moment's thought, must be very hurtful.

"Why not for grown people, then?"

Sure enough, why not?

I have heard a great many old women say: "When I was a young girl and lived on the farm, we didn't think of wearing stockings every day, and it wasn't uncommon for us to go barefooted."

I believe that men, women and children, through warm weather, wear a great amount of unnecessary clothing over the whole body, which is positively debilitating.

The Irish and the English.

Matthew Arnold in the Nineteenth Century.

"There are forces," as George Sand says truly and beautifully, "there are forces of weakness, of docility, of attractiveness and of suavity, which are quite as real as the forces of vigor, of encroachment, of violence or of brutality." And to those softer but not less real forces the Irish people are peculiarly sensitive. They are full of sentiment, they have by nature excellent manners themselves, and they feel the charm of manners instinctively. "Courtesy," says Vauvenargues, "is the bond of all society, and there is no society which can last without it." If courtesy is required to cement society, no wonder the Irish are estranged from us. For we must remember who it is of us that they mostly see, who and what it is that in the main represent our civilization to them. * * * English civilization means to the Irish the civilization of our middle class, and few indeed are the attractions which to them, with their quickness, sentiment, fine manners and indisposition to be pleased with things English, that civilization seems to have. They do not see the exceptions in our middle class, they do not see the good which is present even in the mistrained mass of it. All its members seem of one type of civilization to an Irish eye, and that type a repulsive one.

His Wife for a Congregation.

From the New York Sun.

A difficulty between the pastor and the congregation of the African M. E. Church at Flushing has created no little excitement in that community. The pastor, the Rev. J. A. Mowbray, was appointed by the Conference on June 1, 1880. The congregation were very much dissatisfied with him, and wrote to Bishop Brown to that effect, but Mr. Mowbray was reappointed by the Conference on the first of this month. The trustees of the church decided that they would show their antagonism. He was told that he was in discord with the congregation, but he answered that he was appointed by his Bishop and he would stay until the Bishop called him away. Last Sunday morning when the pastor went to the church as usual he was surprised to find that the trustees had locked the door and refused him admittance. However, he burst open the door and entered the church. It is said that his wife was the only person who listened to his discourse that morning. In the afternoon only his children attended the Sunday school, and in the evening he discovered that the trustees had shut off the gas.

The Spider as a Balloonist.

From the Rochester Democrat.

In speaking of the intelligence displayed by birds and beasts, Seth Green argued strongly in favor of the reasoning power of insects especially, and related from his own experience the manner in which a spider constructs a balloon. If you anchor a pole in a body of water leaving the pole above the surface, and put a spider upon it, he will exhibit marvelous intelligence by his plans to escape. At first he will spin a web several inches long and hang to one end while he allows the other to float off in the wind, in the hope that it will strike some object. Of course this plan proves a failure, but the spider is not discouraged. He waits until the wind changes, and then sends another silken bridge floating off in another direction. Another failure is followed by several other similar attempts, until all the points of the compass have been tried. But neither the resources nor the reasoning powers of the spider are exhausted. He climbs to the top of the pole and energetically goes to work to construct a silken balloon. He has no hot air with which to inflate it, but he has the power of making it buoyant. When he get his balloon finished he does not go off upon the mere supposition that it will carry him, as men often do, but he fastens to it a guy rope, the other end of which he attaches to the island pole upon which he is a prisoner. He then gets into his aerial vehicle while it is made fast and tests it to see whether its dimensions are capable of the work of bearing him away. He often finds that he has made it too small, in which case he hauls it down, takes it all apart and constructs it on a larger and better plan. A spider has been seen to make three different balloons before he became satisfied with his experiment. Then he will get in, snap the guy rope and sail away to land as gracefully and as supremely independent of his surroundings as could well be imagined. Mr. Green stated that he had repeatedly witnessed such actions by spiders, and that he feels convinced that it is reason, with which the Creator of all things endowed the animals, that enabled them to free themselves from their prison.

A Jewess' Self-Sacrifice.

From the Chicago Times.

All the Jews on the levee thronged the Armory Police Court to witness the trial of Max Steinberg on a charge of bigamy. The man Steinberg had been living on Polk street with a woman who was to all intents and purposes his wife. Everything passed very smoothly until their threshold was darkened by another daughter of Israel who had come all the way from England bringing two little black eyed children with her. She produces positive proof that a rabbi had united her and Max across the water; that he had deserted her, and that it was after a long and painful search that she had found him in Chicago. Things looked very black for the son of Levi, but his second wife saved him, as it was afterwards said, at the expense of her own honor. She swore that she had never been legally married to him, and had no claims on him whatever. There was a baby nestling in her arms while she testified, and the justice asked her pointedly whether Steinberg was its father. After a moment's hesitation, she replied in the negative. The case was accordingly dismissed, and the large number of Israelites trooped out of the court, excitedly discussing the different aspects of the trial, which they had watched with the greatest interest. Some were of the opinion that the second wife had testified falsely to save Steinberg, and this view was founded on the story of an officer, who said that the same woman had shown him her marriage lisence on the night previous.

The Washington Monument.

Washington Special to Cincinnati Gazette.

To-day the Washington monument reached a height of exactly 200 feet. Of this elevation about thirty feet have been added since the work began upon it last spring. It is thought that not less than thirty feet, and possibly forty-five feet, more will be added before operations are suspended next winter. The latter figure can easily be reached with fair weather and no bad luck, if the marble is furnished rapidly enough. That it will be is by no means certain, however, as it is not always supplied as fast as the workmen can handle it with the new and improved machinery for hoisting, etc., now in use. Each course consists of a layer of stone precisely two feet thick, which is to be the thickness of all the courses from the foundation to the top. The stones are not, however, all of one length or breadth. They vary in these dimensions in order to break the joints, and bind the work as firmly as possible; but they are as long and wide as they can be procured, as the more massive the stone the more secure and lasting the structure will be. The ultimate height of the monument is to be 550 feet, which will make it considerably the highest artificial object in the world at the present time, and the highest, as it is believed, ever constructed by man. It is thought that the whole shaft can be completed in three years more time.

Capt. Boyton started on the longest trip of his life at 6:30 p. m. yesterday. Fifteen minutes before that time the Captain drove down to the wharf and boarded the little steamer St. Jacobs Oil at the foot of Carr street.

The boat carrying the Captain and his friends ran out into the stream, and when in the middle Boyton inflated his suit and prepared for action. Clara Ellison, the well known soubrette, was on board and she tied a blue ribbon to the Captain's paddle as a souvenir. Boyton returned the compliment by kissing Miss Ellison, after which he leaped into the water. He expects to be forty-eight hours in the water, reaching Cairo to-morrow night. He made arrangements to telegraph his movements along the route. He was accompanied by Dr. Cronau and a negro servant, who pulled after him in a boat.

Sword and Pen.

A new historic work by John Algeron Owens relating to the ventures and adventures of Willard Glazier (the soldier author), in war and literature. It is a well-written book, full of interesting facts in the career of a young man who seems to have had a great faculty to get along well in the world, to see and learn a great deal wherever he went, and to narrate what he witnessed in an entertaining manner. Capt. Glazier did valiant service during the late war, and a large portion of the volume is devoted to his experiences and observations in camp, on the march, in prison and upon the battle field. After the war was over he made the unprecedented journey—ocean to ocean—from Boston to San Francisco on horseback, and the adventures and hair-breadth escapes upon the perilous trip forms the concluding chapter of the volume. The book is well printed and bound and beautifully illustrated, and now being sold in St. Louis by accomplished lady solicitors and by subscription only. Price, $2.

THE Bismarck Tribune of the 19th says: The steamer Batchelor is in her way down the river with 9,700 hides, 4,000 being buffalo robes consigned to one firm. The Eclipse on her last trip brought down 8,000, and the two boats during the season expect to bring from the Yellowstone country 50,000. The hunters and choppers of Montana will receive over half a million dollars for furs this season. They have plenty of money and are prosperous.

The Batchelor and Emma Graham are due to-night. The towboat Fred Wilson No. 2 arrived, and after coaling, started back to Louisville with equal to fourteen barges. The towboat Sam Brown arrived. The coal men are considerably exercised over rumors that the new bridge across the Monongahela will not be much higher than the present old structure. They are determined that the original plan shall be adhered to. The old bridge has been a serious drawback to the coal trade for years.

The Planets Swerving the Sun Off His Center Nearly a Million Miles,

Producing a Marked Decrease in the Terrestrial Temperature,

And Playing Havoc With Human Health.

The conjunction of the planets with the sun, it is reasoned by those who have made it a careful study, is having a very marked effect on that luminary. It is estimated that the sun has been drawn from its place 700,000 miles. If this is so the effect on the earth must be marked. As a matter of fact it is said by meteorologists that the average temperature during the past winter had been several degrees lower than for many years, and the effect upon humanity has been seen in a great increase of mortality. The winter has been a long one and a cold one. The summer promises to be a long and hot one. This means increased mortality. It is therefore of the greatest importance that the health should be carefully guarded. Do not permit the slightest approach of disease. It has become an admitted fact that nothing so thoroughly restores and keeps the body in perfect health as Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

D. W. Bartine, M. D., D. D., who resides in Orange, N. J., after a careful experience, has given the following facts to the public:

Some three months ago I found myself suffering from Bright's disease—Albuminuria. By the use of a reliable test I found albumen in the urine, and in some slight degree in a few instances in a coagulated state. I suffered from dropsy, particularly about the ankles, slight pains about the kidneys, a derangement of digestion, great dryness of the skin, at times much thirst, and, of course, a gradual failing of strength. This was about the state of things when I commenced using Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. I took about six tablespoonfuls every day for a week, when I found all my symptoms decidedly improved, and at the end of two weeks it was difficult to detect any trace of albumen. Having imprudently taken cold, I had a slight relapse some two weeks ago, when I began again using the medicine, and am now as well as ever.

The conclusion from the above statement and the facts which accompany it must be evident. Disease is in our midst, and we must guard ourselves in time. A little precaution may save severe sickness, perhaps death.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CITY

A FIRE has almost destroyed the town of Tombstone, Arizona. Let its epitaph be written.

PARNELL threatens to pay us another visit in July. He is no longer a novelty and there will be a falling off in the gate-money this time.

IF the Governor doesn't interpose, the TALBOTT boys, who murdered their father in Nodaway county, will be executed at Maryville.

JAY GOULD has finally gobbled up our big bridge and there was no "bonus." Perhaps he will take a notion some day to build us a decent Union Depot.

THAT kidney medicine man's prize has brought another comet. Two sky gazers claim to have discovered it at the same time, and difficulty will be experienced in making the award. We would suggest a "jack. pot."

IT is to be hoped that the Canadian farmers who took stock in Mother SHIPTON'S prophesy and knocked off in order to allow the world to come to an end will rally this fall in time to put in a crop of mangel-wurzel.

BRO. BEECHER sticks out conspicuously in the POND divorce suit in Boston. He used his powerful influence to induce Miss ISABELLA STONE to marry Maj. POND. The old gentleman seems to be always on hand when there is anything in the emotional line.

THE deleterious chicken salad got its work in on thirty-five Georgia pic-nickers at Decatur yesterday, and if there had not been thirty-five stomach pumps within easy reach by rail at Atlanta there would be thirty-five funerals in course of preparation there to-day.

THAT monster marine failure, the steamship Great Eastern, is to be sold at public auction. Our Government should sell off its rotten war vessels to the old junk dealers and purchase the Great Eastern. She could be sheathed with boiler-iron, loaded with our old pot-metal guns and made to answer for an entire navy for us.

A FIERCE attack is made upon Gov. CRITTENDEN by the Jefferson City Tribune, up to date a staunch organ of the Administration. The Tribune charges that the Governor has appointed too many St. Louis Republicans as Notaries. It will be in order for the Globe-Democrat to remark that it was necessary for the Governor to select persons for these positions who could read and write.

THERE are Democratic horses it seems. A veterinary surgeon writes to a morning paper to say that he has known horses that were so prejudiced against negroes that they would not permit them to come near them, much less mount them. We would like to know whether such animals, if attached to a common carrier livery stable, would be amenable under the Civil Rights Bill?

THE youthful attorney, Mr. FURLING, who came near being assassinated in the Criminal Court room yesterday, and who was fined two or three times for insulting witnesses, has evidently mistaken his calling. His temperament is not adapted to the practice of law. Mr. FURLING should seek a lodge in some vast wilderness, some boundless contiguity of shade, and devote himself to the rearing of such docile animals as sheep and mules.

THE gentlemen who are proposing to light the city of St. Louis with electricity must prepare themselves for a terrible conflict with the old Gas companies. The street railway monopolists fight the elevated railway project, and the gas rings will make unrelenting war upon anybody who threatens to interfere with their fat privileges. If St. Louis is to keep abreast of the times she will be compelled to march over the prostrate bodies of these monopolies.

IT IS reported that Gen. H. B. BANNING of Cincinnati has the inside track in the free-for-all scramble for the Democratic nomination for Governor of the State. BANNING bounds about like a beautiful gazelle and shakes hands with a real camp-meeting fervor, but he is too prodigal of promises to last long as a politician. He has ten thousand unredeemed pledges standing against him from his last Congressional campaign and if he is nominated for Governor they will be apt to plague him.

GOV. CORNELL, of New York, has vetoed the bill passed by the present Legislature providing for the pensioning of public school teachers after a certain term of service. It is quite certain that after a man has served as a pedagogue for forty or fifty years he is fit for nothing except a pension, but the same may be said of book peddlers and piano players. The Governor probably takes the ground that, so long as the State maintains alms-houses, debilitated and superannuated school teachers will not be without refuge.

SOME of our patrons in the northern and southern sections of the city complain that they do not receive their papers with regularity. This is not the fault of our carriers. On some of our routes boys have been detected systematically stealing the POST-DISPATCH from door-yards after its proper delivery. If we had an afternoon rival financially able to employ thieves to do this sort of business we would attribute these attempts to injure us to the envy that misguided and unfortunate people always feel toward those who are happy and prosperous. We are forced to assume, however, that boys steal our paper because of its intrinsic value.

FOR comprehensiveness commend us to the following in yesterday's POST-DISPATCH: "The tramps arrested in the city are being utilized street for work.—[Sedalia Bazoo.

A newspaper that has nothing original about it save its name, and which is indebted to us for its best editorial thought, should not violate the established rules of newspaper decorum by snickering at a typographical blunder.

TWO HUNDRED special policemen and 3,000 soldiers are guarding Petroph, the present residence of the Czar. To keep up this establishment costs over $5,600 a day—a rather dear rate for protection. In contrast to this state of things another European potentate, Queen MARGHARITA, of Italy, dispenses entirely with guards and carbineers when she goes abroad, relying on her beauty and virtue as her sole protection. If she has no more beauty or virtue than the average Continental Queen we can point out a lady who is in great bodily danger.

VENNOR, who is something of a fraud, writes to the editor of the Cincinnati Commercial as follows:

I regret to have to warn you of a hot and stormy July, with frequent disastrous storms of wind, hail and rain throughout those sections in which the June storms have been so severely felt. The month will resemble that of 1880, rather than 1879.

There hasn't been a July in this latitude since the landing of DE SOTO that hasn't been more or less hot and stormy and more or less decorated with congealed rain-drops.

CARLYLE wrote a whole volume upon the influence of dress, and he might have added a valuable appendix had he noted the effect of the new helmet upon the St. Louis police force. Under the benign influences of the new head-covering the men have become suddenly self-respectful and at the same time filled with a craving to make themselves as conspicuous as possible. The streets swarm with police. It is queer, too, to note the change which this rather natty helmet has effected in the morale of the force— a change which can only be appreciated by being seen. The men are smarter, quicker, more efficient than they were, all of which is the result of the new clothes, and all of which will wear off as the clothes get rusty. It has been noted over and over again in armies that for a month or so after the issuing of new uniforms the soldiers improve wonderfully in efficiency, and here in St. Louis we have a parallel case in point.

THE fire in the Louisville Courier-Journal office night before last entailed a very severe loss upon Col. HENRI WATTERSON, who was at his club at the time engaged in his customary vesperian game of draw poker. Col. WITHERSPOON, Major HARTWRIGHT, Gen. MASSENGALE, Col. GUTRIPPAH, Col. STARK and he were playing, and the time had come when Col. WATTERSON had arranged for his grand coup. It was his deal and on the come-in WITHERSPOON blinded ten dollars. MASSENGALE straddled and STARK double straddled. Everybody came in and there was thus $480 in the pot to start with. In the draw WITHERSPOON, STARK and WATTERSON stood "pat." The others drew one card each. STARK bet a hundred dollars. WATTERSON raised him a thousand. The other players simply "saw the raise" until it came to STARK, who saw the thousand and went ten thousand better. WATTERSON saw the ten thousand and raised it ten thousand. HARTWRIGHT laid down his hand. WITHERSPOON "saw" the raise. MASSENGALE also "saw." Major GUTRIPPAH dropped out, and the gallant STARK was just about raising WATTERSON'S bet back when the alarm of fire in the Courier-Journal office was brought into WATTERSON and he hastily dropped his hand and rushed to the scene of the conflagration. The other gentlemen followed him, leaving the pot of $77,080 on the table. While the players were out a fresh negro janitor came into the room, gathered up all the hands and packed them up nicely and evenly in the deck, stacked the money and checks into a nice little pile, and putting the smooth cards on top as a paper-weight went off to see the fire, too. Of course when the players returned there was nothing for it but to divide the pot, which was done in a deep and ominous silence. From the fact that Col. WATTERSON asked to be excused a moment and went out and killed the nigger, it has been inferred that he had nothing less than a straight flush with king up. STARK had his customary four aces. It will be thus seen that while the fire in the Courier-Journal was trivial, the loss to the concern in connection therewith was very severe.

PERSONAL.

—Miss Nellie Hutchinson is chief editor of the New York Sunday Tribune. Miss Nancy Hay assists her.

—Messrs. Gilbert and Sullivan have written another comic opera, whose title is reported to be "The Princess."

—Most of the Southern members of the U. S. Senate are making themselves useful as commencement orators at Southern colleges.

—An exchange says that Mrs. Julia Ward Howe lived within a few miles of Hawthorne for many years, but saw the great novelist only twice. Hawthorne always was lucky.

—Walt Whitman says that "Whittier's verses are like the measured tread of Cromwell's veterans." Most of Whitman's verses sound at if a veteran was falling down stairs with his boots on.

—Mr. Talmage is probably right about the world not wanting a revised edition of the Bible. What the world really hankers for is a revised edition of Talmage. He needs to be revised with a case of Asiatic cholera.

—The Saturday Review says that Wilkie Collins has no dramatic instincts, and yet is always casting his novels into a dramatic form. The Review should write a novel to serve as a model. No doubt it would command a select audience.

—Prince Rudolph and his young wife are going to spend the summer at Ischl, the Tyrolean watering-place, where the Austrian Emperor has a castle. A little villa is being prettily fitted up for the young pair whose honeymoon is not yet over.

—Dr. W. H. Russell, the journalist, is the only member of the Duke of Sutherland's party who takes pains to be fashionable in attire and particular about his gloves and umbrella. The Doctor's bright, dark brown eyes, have still a youthful fire, and his gray moustache is as trim as his figure is erect. Bill is the only man of the party who has a good, steady salary and he can afford to spruce up.

Dr. Reilly's Grand Bounce.

ST. LOUIS, June 23, 1881.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

In your edition of yesterday you have done a great injustice to the officers and members of Marquette Council, A. L. of H. Firstly, in having given credence and publicity to the statement of your informant in which he says that matters, vulgar and indecent, were introduced during Dr. Reilly's partial initiation last Monday evening. This I desire to brand as an infamous falsehood. Secondly, your reporter does serious wrong to us when he states that Dr Reilly was induced to join the American Legion of Honor under "false pretenses."

Dr. Reilly made application for membership to and was received by George Washington Council, and, it was at the suggestion of Deputy Supreme Commander Brooks and at the voluntary and personal request of Dr. Reilly, made in the presence of the council, that Marquette Council proceeded to confer on the doctor "the Medical Examiner's degree." The only thing "false" in the whole affair is Dr. Reilly's violation of his solemn obligation of secrecy, to which he pledged his word of honor. Yours truly,

R. S. MCDONALD,
Commander Marquette Council.

Wind Up the Business.

From the Boston Herald.

According to General Brady, the chief object of the Star Route Ring was to elect General Garfield to the Presidency. As it seems to have been an entire success and all the Star Route people have made fortunes, there ought to be no objection to breaking up the ring now.

A Pair of Conundrums.

From the Chicago Times.

If John Sherman was so admirable a Secretary of the Treasury, why didn't he uncover Pitney and his processes? If Mr. Haves was so aggressively honest an executive, why didn't he leave to his successor the exposure of Brady and the Star-Route ring?

The Squeak and Growl.

From the Philadelphia Times.

Mr. Platt is no longer serving as Mr. Conkling's squeak. The eminent ex-statesman has in its place hired General Grant's growl, which can be heard farther on a cold day.

No Excitement.

From the Cincinnati Commercial.

There is not a great deal of excitement now-a-days when another interview by Gen. Grant is mentioned. But the General's talk is becoming somewhat monotonous.

Was It Kleptomania?

A few minutes after 12 o'clock to-day Officer Joe Sullen was signaled by a runner from the Wm. Barr Dry Goods Co. The officer equal to the emergency was soon quartered in the private office of Mr. Franklin, where that gentleman sat leaning back in an easy chair surrounded by three gentlemen and an elderly lady. As soon as the officer could catch his breath he asked what was wanted. Mr. Franklin informed him that that lady standing there was caught in the act of stealing some goods, and what had they better do with her? The officer was about to seize upon the victim of kleptomania when Mr. Franklin stayed his hand. Mr. Franklin then asked her to explain herself. She had nothing to say, otherwise than that she was not guilty of the theft, at the same time not appearing to be indignant at the charge that was put against her. After receiving a good lecture, and repeatedly pleading to be let off this time, she was permitted to go. From her dialect she apparently is of French descent, and gave the name of Dyer and residence on Caroline street. This is the second occurrence of this kind.

The Christian Brothers' College.

The closing exercises of the Christian Brothers' College take place this evening. The exhibitions generally continue for three evenings, but the stress of weather caused the dove tailing of Tuesday and Wednesday night's programmes in one for last evening, making an exhibition which for real merit and interest has not been surpassed at the college for years. As a general rule there are a number of viva voce examinations held on each of the first two nights, and under the dispensation of the weather these were all dropped and only the essays, declamations and music of the two programmes given. The menu for to-night is a particularly attractive one. D. Terence Stone, one of the graduates, leads off with De Beriot's seventh air varie. The graduating class consists of John J. Cullinane, Elisha H. Gregory, Lawrence H. Carr, John D. Hurley and D. Terence Stone. Mr. John D. Hurley will deliver the valedictory and Mr. D. H. McAdam the address to the graduates. The alumini dinner is set for Monday next.

All patrolmen are specially ordered in making arrests for cruelty to animals to be particular to bring to the station any whip, stick, shovel, piece of board or other instrument used in committing the act of cruelty, to be used as evidence in court.

Court of Criminal Correction.

In the Court of Criminal Correction today charges of assault to kill against Howell G. and Ellen Trogden and malicious trespass against Thomas Gobout were continued generally. Leo Schmitt was discharged. He was arraigned on a charge of petit larceny. On this charge Oscar Ehrman was sent to the Work House for six months. James Morgan was given thirty days in jail. The case of John Shearn was dismissed at prosecutor's cost.

New Cases.

Last night Private Watchman Gumersell arrested George Robinson, alias George Sharp, alias George Hunter, alias George Hensley, alias Bluffy Joe, and Edward Tansey. Mrs. Sheridan gave bond to answer a charge of malicious trespass to-day and John Bahn for riotously disturbing the peace.

Released.

JOYOUS ST. JOSEPH'S.

The Girl Graduates Hold Their Exercises at the Academy of the Sisters.

Crowning of Graduates and Distribution of Honors—The Programme—The Pupils' Work.

Among the institutions for the education of girls the Academy of the Sisters of St. Joseph holds a very prominent position. Founded in 1836 when the Right Rev. Joseph Rosati governed the Diocese of St. Louis, and incorporated in 1835, the sisters of the academy have continued to add yearly to their reputation as instructors of girls till they equal any institution for the same purpose in the West. The building is situated on an elevation on Third and Kansas streets which commands a view of the Missis-ippi and all the surrounding country for more than a mile in all directions.

The forty-fifth annual distributions took place at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Towards 3 o'clock the large hall in the north wing of the building rapidly filled up with a select audience, many of whom came miles to witness the efforts of their daughters. A noticeable feature about the hall was the utter absence of decorations in the building, but the whole premises around the building was covered with trees and flowers of all descriptions, and laid off into a beautiful park, through which the pupils are allowed to roam in charge of one of the sisters. The room adjoining the hall is adorned with the paintings and drawings of the advanced pupils, and on a center table is exhibited a rare collection of wax and shell work, executed by the young ladies themselves unaided by their teachers. The display of needle and crochet work excited the admiration of all who were admitted to the room where they were on exhibition. Two beautiful crosses of wax work, entwined with flowers and wreaths and executed by Misses Nellie Buckley and Bessie Shelby, were first on the center table. Immediately behind them followed two lake scenes with water lilies growing in the center and geese swimming near by, presenting a very beautiful scene, wrought in wax by Miss Nellie Stoops. Three harps interwoven with flowers and hanging vines with little wax-doves perched on top, executed by Misses M. Fitzgerald, Mamie Conway and Snow Reames, were the most attractive features of the wax work display. In the center of this display was a large and beautiful arch of shell work made to form roses, honey-suckles, pond lilies, etc. It was executed by Miss Emma Ritter. Two large wax crosses covered with a wax veil were contributed to the display by Misses Alice Cummings and Kate Gibbons. The oil paintings were numerous. A representative of a Faith, Hope and Charity, produced by Miss Sadie Elliott, deserves special attention.

The programme of exercises was as follows:

THEY'RE ALL MAD.

What Soldene's Ladies and Soldene's Manager Say About Soldene.

If Mrs. Hersee ever meets Emily Soldene in this mundane vale of tears, she'll Liverpool Irish her; that much is settled and certain. Mrs. Hersee will be remembered as the lady whom Emily Soldene took particular occasion to pick to pieces in an interview printed in this paper on Monday last. She is a willowy widow with a pleasant, well chiseled face, a lithe, finely rounded form, a neat ankle and a small foot which is decorated just now with a couple of peculiarly aggravating corns. Her stage name is Maggie Duggan, and the details of her unpleasant married life with Clive Hersee have already become public property. A POST-DISPATCH reporter met all the ladies of the late Soldene Troupe rehearsing "Billee Taylor" at the Tivoli, and he was not long in discovering that there were two sides to the story told by Emily.

Miss Duggan led off with a general statement that Soldene was unutterably mean and unreliable, and that she had quarreled bitterly with Clive Hersee during the whole time he was with the troupe, whereas she was now pretending to have been his friend.

Miss Claire Elliston took exception to Soldene's statement that the girls got nothing but a couple of Gainsborough hats at Leadville. She kindly showed the reporter a $250 diamond ring which she had carried off, together with an offer of marriage from that town. The Elliston is a dimpled little beauty whose skin-tight jersey emphasizes the kinship she bears to a butter-ball.

Rose Stella has lived five years with Soldene and hates her with an intensity and fervor which even Ballenberg envies. Nobody seems to have anything specially to say against her, but each expresses a malignancy of feeling which can only be the growth of long suppression.

Ballenberg himself, however, talks. He has lost $12,000 on the trip and he charges Soldene with having been the sole cause of it. He is very indignant and yet even funnier than he is mad. "I had about as much show with that gang as a cat without claws in h—ades. First it was one side and then it was another, until between them both I had no peace at all. I wish I had broken my leg before I started out with them—or my neck. I wish I had left them in Leadville or in h—ades and gone home when the trouble began. Now, there was Leadville. We opened at Leadville to a $500 house, and that old woman, you know, Soldene is fifty-four years old, had to come frisking out, kicking up her skirts and shocking the people. People will stand that kind of thing from a young, pretty girl, but they won't have it from an old woman with grandchildren. It looks positively indecent the way she does it." Mr. Ballenberg is able to talk this way for forty-eight hours on the stretch, and the conclusion to which he comfortably comes is that he is the most monumental ass (which he spells with a long a) in America for having touched Soldene in the first place.

THE COTTON EXPOSITION.

Preparations for the International Exhibition at Atlanta, Ga.

The city of Atlanta, Georgia, is just now devoting great enterprise to the successful inauguration of the International Cotton Exposition, which has been located at that point, and will be open to the world from October 5 to December 31 of the present year. Already the preparations have reached a scale and extent which promise an exhibition of magnitude and importance only surpassed by the Centennial. The buildings in process of erection are extensive and many, and will accommodate thousands of exhibitors. The exposition fund has been made up largely in Atlanta, with liberal subscriptions to the capital stock in the cities of Norfolk, Baltimore, New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Cincinnati. Chicago, at a meeting of her Board of Trade yesterday, took steps toward subscribing for stock and liberally exhibiting at the exposition.

THE EXPOSITION IN ST. LOUIS.

Director General Kimball and Commissioner Hadteman arrived in the city from Chicago this morning and are at the Lindell. They are here for the purpose of fully explaining the plans and advantages of the great cotton and industrial fair, so admirably located in the South, to the business men and manufacturers of St. Louis. Our railway connections and commercial relations with the people of the South, who will gather in thousands at the Exposition, make it almost imperative that St. Louis should occupy a prominent place in the affair, and that her superior wares and her advantages as a market should be fully displayed in the Exposition.

ADDRESSES TO-MORROW

will be delivered at the Merchants' Exchange by Director General Kimball and Col. Hardeman. They will speak in response to numerous requests from interested parties in St. Louis, and every merchant and manufacturer interested in the Southern trade should be on hand at noon to-morrow.

Col. J. W. Paramore, Mr. Wm. L. Black, Mr. Senter and several other prominent St. Louis gentlemen are vice presidents of the Exposition and are giving it all the aid and encouragement possible.

The demands upon the managers for space outside of purely cotton exhibits and adjuncts have led them to throw open the exhibition to articles of every description. The classification is now as broad as that of the Centennial, and hence the Exposition becomes at once both national and international. St. Louis, with her vast diversified industries can make a most magnificent exhibit, and reap from it a large increase in the volume of her Southern and Southeastern trade.

The Wicked Nephew of a Good Uncle.

A young man was picked up in the western suburbs last night who announced himself as a "sad sea dog" and "the nephew of Sam Cupples." Officer Todd, after several vain efforts to quiet the sorrowful marine canine, took him to the station, where he was registered under the name of B. J. Smith. He gave his occupation as a railroad clerk, and persisted in claiming avuncular relationship with the Vice-President of the Police Board. After reaching the Four Courts this morning Smith was recognized by a lawyer who loaned him five dollars and put in a plea for dismissal at costs. After Judge Jecko had heard the circumstances he accepted the costs and let the young man go.

Disemboweled.

While car No. 58, of the Fifth Street Line, was going north on Broadway about 4:30 yesterday afternoon the horses became detached and ran away. At Hempstead street one of the horses ran into an ice wagon and the tongue of which disemboweled the animal. In this condition the horse ran to Mound street where it was killed.

AT about 9 o'clock this morning a stable in the alley between Eighth and Ninth and Carr and Biddle was discovered to be on fire. Engine No. 12 was immediately on the ground and the fire was soon extinguished. The stable belonged to Mr. Thos. Greene, whose loss in hay and grain amounts to $200 or $300.

THIS evening, at 8 o'clock, in St. John's Library Hall, Sixteenth and Chestnut streets, will be held an adjourned meeting of Catholic gentlemen interested in the Orphan's Picnic, which will be given at the Fair Grounds on July 4. Reports from various committees will be heard and other matters of general interest discussed and disposed of. The committees have met with excellent success in their work, and the most satisfactory results are announced.

Everett House Sale.

We call attention to a sale which takes place to-morrow at the Court House. See advertisement in this day's paper.

ANTE UP.

The Revenue Officers Stir Up the Commission Merchants.

Quite a little breeze has been stirred up on 'Change and among the Second street merchants by the new action taken yesterday and to-day by the United States Revenue authorities. It seems that the St. Louis commission houses have been filling orders from country customers for whisky and tobacco, and at the same time failing to protect themselves by taking out U. S. license as dealers in whisky and tobacco. For some time the revenue officers here have been meditating a descent upon the commission men, and bright and early yesterday morning the raid was begun. A polite officer would drop into a commission house, and after sweet commune with the owners about the weather and the crops would inquire as to the extent to which the firm had been handling whisky and fermented liquors during the year. The answer came invariably that the firm did not deal in liquors; then the polite revenue agent would ask to be permitted to examine the firm's books, and the result has been in almost every instance that the firm has been invited to pay into the treasury of the Commonwealth sums ranging from $5 to $1,000. As the penalties for refusing to pay this money are very heavy the sums have been promptly handed over to Mr. Sturgeon, whose exchequer will show an increase of fully ten thousand dollars owing to the enforcement of this rule. The case as made by the commission houses is a strong one, but it has been decided by the Collector not to be a good one. If John Jones, of Louisiana, ordered Miles Sells & Co. to send him two barrels of whisky along with other goods, the order would be sent up to Derby & Day, who would fill it and send their bill to Sells, made out against Jones. Sells would pay it and charge Jones, not with the whisky but with the cash used in paying the bill, thus entirely evading, as it was thought, the license law, and the more so that the commission firm made no profit out of the order at all, but simply passed it on. The Collector has decided, however, that they are handling whisky, and must pay the license accordingly with all the penalties provided by law. The license is $100 for dealers in liquors and fifty per cent penalty for not paying it. $50 for dealers in beer alone, and fifty per cent penalty. To name the firms which have these sums to pay would simply be to publish a directory of all the commission houses in the city, as every one of them has been trading under this misapprehension of the law. Slayback & Smith, Sells & Bro., D. P. Rowland, Kirtland, Humphrey & Co. and a host of others have been up to the Captain's office to settle.

Court Crumbs.

The Public Administrator has taken charge of the estate of John Kehoe.

Judge Thayer will sit to-morrow in Circuit Court No. 5, when the law docket will be called.

Judge Lindley will sit to-morrow in Circuit Court No. 4, when cases argued on Monday last will be decided.

Letters of administration were granted to-day to John H. Fisse on the estate of Ella D. Shade, valued at $1,200, and to Patrick Farrell, administrator of Ellen Horan.

Emily C. B. Carkener, widow of the late Hudson C. Carkener and trustee under the will, has petitioned the Circuit Court for a decree constructing that document. It seems that the widow renounced the provisions of the will and elected to take a dower interest and without further proceeding in the administration for the minor children.

A Contest Among the Notaries.

The 2,000 applicants for notarial positions are still being made, and as the time approaches and they still see no hope, they are looking around for a remedy of their own. A prominent applicant, who failed to get there, however, told a P.-D. reporter this morning that as soon as the balance of the names were mentioned steps would be taken to contest the constitutionality of the law. The ground upon which the contest will be sprung is that the old Notaries were appointed for a certain time and cannot be removed before that time except for cause. M. J. Kinealy is mentioned as the lawyer who will institute the proceedings. Several of the disappointed applicants think this their only hope and declare that the contest will knock the law higher than a kite.

The Washington Star of the 21st inst. says: Mr. Jeff Chandler, a well known St. Louis lawyer who figured in the defense in the St. Louis Whisky Ring frauds, has been retained by Gen. Brady to defend any suits which may be brought against him arising out of the Star Route prosecutions.

ST. JOHN'S ANNIVERSARY.

To-Day's Celebration by the Masonic Order at Louisville.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOUISVILLE, June 23.—The grand Masonic celebration of St. John's anniversary continues to-day. The tournament ground for the military and Templar competitive and display drills is on the south side of Central Park, inclosed, 490 feet square. On the west, south and north sides seats have been erected for 8,000 people in tiers, and from each seat a full view of the field can be had. The field is magnificent. Just in front of the stands the turf has been cut and the ground leveled and rolled smooth as a floor. On this space (160 by 450 feet) the drill will take place. In the center of the field the green grass has been left and a striped marquee has been erected. The track for the bicycle races, just a quarter of a mile in length, runs around the field and marked off with cords. It is smooth, hard and fast, and the contestants have an opportunity to record quick time. The raised seats are shaded by canvases, and are quite comfortable and cool. The common stretches on every side, across which there is no obstruction to the breeze. From the seats the magnificent site of the Widows' and Orphans' Home, the noble charity for which the celebration is given, can be plainly and advantageously seen to the southward. Better arranged grounds for the purposes in view could not have been secured anywhere.

For the parade Col. H. B. Grant was Chief Marshal in command. His aids were Capt. H. W. Wessels, U. S. A.; Capt. Ernest McPherson, Lieut. A. D. Mullikin, K. S. G.; Sir James S. Ray, Sir D. M. Rodman, Messrs. L. D. Croninger, Grand Marshal of the Grand Lodge of Kentucky; J. B. Fishback and Phillip Michels. The military was under the command of Gen. J. B. Nuckols, Adjutant General of Kentucky, and the Templars under command of Right Eminent Sir James E. Cantrill, Grand Commander. The lodges were under the especial charge of Grand Marshal Croninger.

The line formed on the south side of Jefferson street in the following order:

RAVAGED BY FIRE.

An Arizona Town Almost Destroyed—Loss, $250,000.

TOMBSTONE, ARIZ, June 23.—Fire swept over the space of six blocks, destroying about one hundred and fifty buildings, including a large part of the business portion of the town. The losses will probably aggregate a quarter of a million. About 800 people are homeless. The buildings are mostly cheap, of temporary charrcter. The fire originated in a saloon from the opening of a barrel of whisky, the flames of which communicated with a cigar lighter. Water was scarce, no fire engines, and but little could be done to check the flames except tear down buildings, etc. A few accidents occurred, none of them being very serious. The Turnverein Hall and Theater were thrown open for the accommodation of those burned out. The insurance agency of Hutchinson, Mann & Smith, of San Francisco, representing a number of companies reports a loss of $200,000. Other companies lose about $45,000 in various small amounts.

The Tombstone Disaster.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—The whole business quarter of Tombstone is destroyed, wiping out a quarter of million of dollars of property and rendering homeless 800 people. There were but few accidents. The Peoria Regatta.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PEORIA, ILLS., June 23.—At a meeting of the Executive Board of M. V. A. R. A., last night, the Mississippi's of St. Louis were disqualified on the ground that as one of them was a tug-boat hand and the other had recently been a raftsman they were therefore not strictly amateurs. The crew were entered for the free-for-all-fours to be rowed to-morrow. The fine-haired members of the association are jubilant, while the public are indignant at the decision. The cup for the championship of the Mississippi Valley has to be won three consecutive times before the award can be made. The Modocs had won it twice, and would have carried it off had not the Mississippi crew, reorganized, entered and gobbled it in the two last races for the cup. The next race for the cup comes off in about six weeks with strong prospects of the Mississippi crew winning. Yesterday the Modocs did not win a race, which made Mr. St. John of St. Louis, their patron saint, so mad that he entered a protest against the Mississippi's as stated. The latter club were to have been the opponents of the Modocs in the free-for-all-four to be rowed here to-morrow.

Veterans' Reunion.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, June 23.—The ex-prisoners of war three days' reunion closes with a grand street parade this afternoon and a banquet to-night at the Music Hall. The event has been a great success and will undoubtedly be followed by biennial reunions hereafter. The veterans feel they are growing old and that the reunion business will soon come to an end.

THAT HOT CORN.

Considerable Feeling Excited Over the Report on 'Change.

The reported arrival of hot corn at New Orleans that had been shipped by buyers from this market has stirred up considerable feeling on 'Change. Some parties seem to think that the fact should have been kept quiet and not published by the POST-DISPATCH, the only paper that gave all the facts in the matter correctly, these cautious parties being afraid that the river route's reputation would be damaged if this report should go abroad. This, fear, however, seems groundless, as it is a well known fact that corn has been shipped from Chicago by the lake route to both Buffalo and New York that became heated and out of condition before it arrived at its destination. Chief Inspector Livingston vouches for the truth of this statement, which he says he knows to be a fact from personal experience; yet Chicago's reputation has not been hurt as a market to buy corn for export in. It is only the present season of the year, and a peculiar season this year that is seldom seen here, that is having this injurious effect upon corn sent here. The St. Louis grain inspectors say they do not believe this story about "hot corn." They are too particular in their grading here for any No. 2 mixed corn ever to get out of condition after it leaves here. Mr. T. L. Currie, the grain inspector at Venice Elevator, says that he inspected from that elevator one of these barges that is complained about, and he will vouch for the fact that the corn was in best condition when loaded. Mr. T. A. Clayton, of Forstall, Ross & Clayton, steamship agents at New Orleans, and who is now in the city, stated that he had heard something about a shipment of corn arriving at New Orleans out of condition, but did not think it was a matter that should be stirred up or referred to by the newspapers. He was indignant about a statement that had been circulated that it was the four barges of wheat lately shipped from St. Paul that had arrived in New Orleans in bad condition. Mr. Clayton said this report was nonsensical, as this wheat had not yet arrived in New Orleans. Some St. Louis European exporters will not handle corn for shipment to Europe, except they do so at the buyers' risk. One prominent exporter stated to-day that he had refused orders for about 1,500,000 bushels of No. 2 mixed corn, which New Orleans firms wanted guaranteed in good condition free on board. These and European parties would only buy with same conditions delivered at their ports, but he refused to fill any of these orders, as he was afraid of the corn spoiling en route. These four barges, however, is the first lot of corn reported this season as arriving out of condition in New Orleans.

DR. GOODELL EXAMINED.

What He Deposes Concerning Mr. Hall's Character and Conduct.

The deposition of Rev. Dr. Goodell, pastor of Pilgrim Congregational Church, was taken this afternoon before Notary Oldfield in the furniture-contract suit of Mrs. Drake against James E. Hall, the Washington avenue marble merchant and ex-Congregational minister. The Doctor's testimony was taken in behalf of the plaintiff.

The Doctor testified: I know Mr. Hall's reputation in my congregation for truth and veracity. It is not good. I move in a large circle in this city and have heard Mr. Hall's character spoken of by many. He is spoken of as wanting in truth and veracity. Much of my information concerning Hall has reached me in an advisory way from ladies and others in my congregation. I do not deem it proper to speak of matters confided to me in my spiritual relation as pastor. I decline to give names unless I am compelled to do so. Mr. Hardwicke of Massachusetts, brother of Mrs. Hall, Mr. Whittaker and others in ministerial circles have discussed Hall's character. He came here in a business relation, but he was a minister and it was natural that some anxiety should be manifested touching his reputation. The ministers who discussed Hall's character can speak for themselves. They have the gift of tongues.

Counsel—That appears to be Mr. Hall's trouble. He, too, has a gift of tongue. (Laughter.)

Q.—You are acquainted with certain facts concerning Mr. Hall's relations with Mrs. Adams, are you not?

A.—Those are matters of spiritual confidence which I should not disclose.

Q.—Have you not condemned Mr. Hall for his relations with certain ladies of your congregation?

A.—I would prefer to draw the veil over those matters as far as it is possible. Mr. Hall's influence has not been good in those directions. As I am under oath I will say that Mr. Hall was only connected with my church a short time. Hall's actions and character generally have been the subject of discussion at the conference of ministers from time to time. Hall's name has been associated in a way not pleasant to us at different times as is commonly known. He could not be admonished by us for we had no charge over him. He was out of the ministry here and latterly was an attendant of Dr. Ganse's church. Mr. Hardwike's reputation is of the highest order, and Mr. Whittaker, who has lived in this city, is known as worthy man. The ladies mentioned in connection with the statements affecting Hall are all, to use a common speech, "high-toned;" that is to say, the names of ladies of my congregation. Mr. Hall is not associating with those ladies now, for they gained such a knowledge of his character that they wanted nothing more to do with him. Those ladies to my knowledge who have been named as connected with my church are all estimable. I know nothing of Hall's connections outside my church. I do not remember seeing the inscription upon Mr. Hall's watch which is spoken of as having been exhibited by him when his Utah divorce failed to satisfy people of his clear record. I am not acquainted with Mr. Hall's methods of winning the approbation of the ladies. They can answer that better themselves. I do not know whether he quoted poetry, shed tears, etc.

A Lawyer's Apology.

A number of lawyers assembled at the Criminal Court this morning to hear the apology of Mr. Joseph Furling, the lawyer who was fined $20 for addressing Officer Browning as a perjurer. The officer was not in court this morning, and though the young lawyer was ready to apologize he was not permitted to do so until the presence of Officer Browning, who the court held was the injured party.

Four Prisoners Assessed That Punishment in the Criminal Court.

This morning the jury in the case of James Lanigan, alias Edward Clark, who was tried in the Criminal Court yesterday on a charge of perjury, returned a verdict. The defendant was found guilty and his punishment assessed at two years in the Penitentiary.

Lindell, Barker and Baker were arraigned before Judge Laughlin. There were charged with burglary and larceny, but at their own request they were allowed to withdraw their plea of not guilty and enter a plea of guilty to grand larceny. In accordance with this Judge Laughlin sentenced the prisoners to two years each in the Penitentiary.

The Street Car Horses.

Officers of the Humane Society made an inspection last evening of the night stock in use for the several lines of street cars. It is well understood that after dark the poorest cattle in the car stables are run out for the night service, and it happens frequently that animals totally unfit for work are brought to the front and compelled to make a journey in order to complete the schedule. The attention of the Humane Society was brought to the matter, and a very careful scrutiny last evening developed the fact that, with few exceptions, however, the night stock of the respective companies at the present time, and with the cool condition of temperature, may be considered satisfactory. Some of the horses in use on the Market Street Line, Missouri Railroad Company, were pronounced by the officers to be ill-adapted for service and one horse was removed.

For Want of Time.

"I could'nt tell you in a week what she said to me that day" said Mrs. McLaughlin, testifying against Mrs. Grady and Miss Norton in the First District Police Court to-day. Mrs. Grady took the stand and said that Mrs. McLaughlin had started the fuss and "fired a flower pot into the window." Miss Norton had a more distinct memory. She fastened her eyes on the floor in front of the witness-stand and began to testify to what was said, giving the discussion verbatim. Numerous efforts were made to stop her, but they were unsuccessful until Judge Jecko weakened. He stood up. Said he: "Pass these cases down until there is time to hear the matter." There are four parties, Miss Norton, Miss Clymer, Mrs. McLaughlin and Mrs. Grady, in the case. Cross-charges are made.

The City's Relations to the Gas Companies.

The Laclede Particularly Being Removed From Municipal Interference.

The compromise proposition between the city and the St. Louis Gas-Light Company has been made the special order for consideration to-morrow night. It seems that the committeemen while having the matter before them took occasion to explore pretty thoroughly what has been hitherto debatable ground, the legal relations between the city and the corporations. The result was to show that the position taken by the POST-DISPATCH on this phase of the controversy several months ago is that held by the best counsellors. The questions which the committee obtained light on were these:

What will be the legal rights and relations between the city, the State and the St. Louis and Laclede Gas Light companies, January 1, 1890, under the provisions of law and contract in force as now in force?

What conspicuous points of dispute or rights were disposed of by the recent decision of the Supreme Court as relates to the rights of the city under the contract of 1846?

What burdens or license may be imposed upon the gas companies by ordinance?

THE ANSWERS

received to these queries in condensed form by the committee were as follows:

On Jan. 1, 1890, the tripartite contract of 1873, superseding the contract of 1846, will have expired.

The Supreme Court decision sustains the contract of 1873, and decides that the contract of 1846 is of no more force or effect. It further decides that at no time could the city have become the owner of the St. Louis Gas Works by the provisions of the contract of 1846. It further decides that the only remedy the city had before the enactment of the contract of 1873 was a suit for damages, because the company refused to appoint arbitrators. The Court argued that the power to make the contract in 1846 gave the power to cancel.

The St. Louis Gas Light Company at the expiration of its special charter in 1890, or at any time before, can procure the right for 50 years under the State law to make and vend gas and lay down its mains in the streets of St. Louis. The City Council has no authority to grant a franchise or privilege for a gas company to use the streets. Such power comes only from the State.

The State, while it authorizes gas companies to lay their mains in the streets of any city, town or village, empowers such city, town or village to make "reasonable" ordinances or by-laws regulating the laying of such mains.

To what extent the city may interfere by ordinance in 1890 to prevent the St. Louis Company from using its mains then under ground is a legal question which has no precedent decision. It is laid down in Dillon's Municipal Law that no city ordinance "can be repugnant to the policy of the State as declared in its general legislation."

As to the word "reasonable" used above the Supreme Court of Missouri has held that the Court will be the judge in each case whether the exercise of the power given to a city to make reasonable regulations has been properly complied with by the terms of the ordinance.

THE LACLEDE GAS COMPANY,

by the terms of its amended charter of March, 1868, and by the expiration of the 1873 agreement, will have authority after January 1, 1890, without consulting the city, to lay its mains throughout the whole city. Its charter is perpetual, just as the POST-DISPATCH pointed out months ago, and the position is sustained by James O. Broadhead, T. T. Gantt, Horatio M. Jones and W. B. Napton.

The charter gives the Assembly power to make contracts for lighting the streets of the city, but the city has no authority to impose any excessive burthen upon a gas company which receives its authority from the State to occupy the streets. While the city is thus restricted the city and the company may by mutual agreement adopt a contract which shall make the city a beneficiary in the manufacture and sale of gas.

From the above it will be seen that the city's power over the gas companies are limited. The State alone can interfere with the St. Lou's Company and that only after 1890. The Laclede holds a charter which is perpetual, and is only restricted to the present locality until 1890, after which it may go into any part of the city. There may be a difference of opinion in relation to some of the positions stated, but these are the relations the corporations sustain to the city as they have been laid down to the Council Committee and they will be placed before the House Committee when the proposed compromise comes over to the north side of the City Hall for consideration.

The committee has information that New York and Boston have no less than 13 gas companies, that the price of gas is uniform, and that neither city is a beneficiary in the profits. Chicago has two companies whose combined capital is $15,000,000, but the city is not a sharer in the dividends. If St. Louis gets an interest in the profits of gas-making she will be the second city in the United States to effect this arrangement.

DANGEROUSLY HURT.

An Infuriated Cow Gores a Man, Causing a Serious Wound.

Mr. Samuel Stevenson, who resides on Bell street, near Bryan avenue, was attracted to an enclosure in which two fine milch cows were pasturing yesterday morning by the bellowing of one of the animals. The bovines were goring one another, when Mr. Stevenson attempted to separate them. He rushed to a portion of the enclosure, when one of the infuriated cows suddenly turned on and made a dash at him. The horn caught Mr. Stevenson under the left arm, tearing the muscles and flesh two inches long. Weak from loss of blood he was taken to the house where Dr. Shaw examined and dressed the wound, which he pronounced of a very serious character, being situated so near the cavity of the thorax that it was almost impossible to say whether the horn penetrated or not.

Hurt With a Toy Pistol.

About noon yesterday Samuel Brennan, a son of Mr. J. P. Brennan of No. 3327 Olive, was playing with a "Climax" toy pistol loaded with blank cartridges. The play climaxed in the pistol going off unexpectedly when the boy had his hand over the muzzle. He was taken to Grant's drug store, corner of Olive and Channing, where the wound, which was slight, was dressed.

The Big Bridge.

The appropriation of the St. Louis Bridge by the Wabash and Missouri Pacific Railways is a matter of general remark to-day. Jay Gould has for some time had an eye on the bridge, and when he was West a short time since he expressed himself as favorably inclined to its purchase. This fact caused some comment for the time, but little has been heard of it since. On last Tuesday the terms of transfer to the Wabash and Missouri Pacific were settled. The amount of first mortgage bonds is $5,000,000, 7 per cents, payable in London and New York, April 1 and October 1, due in 1928. These bonds the purchasing companies agree to perpetuate at the existing status. The stock amounts to $7,980,000, to the $2,490,000 first preferred, of which 5 per cent for two years and 6 per cent thereafter is awarded by the agreement.

On the $3,000,000 second preferred 3 per cent will be paid. The $2,500,000 common stock is, by the agreement, afforded the perpetual guarantee of the purchasing companies.

HOW TO GET MARRIED.

The New License Law Taking Effect on Monday—Its Conditions.

On Monday morning next the new marriage license law takes effect. For the benefit of those who propose to take the matrimonial leap it may be well to state how the law has directed that it may be accomplished. On and after Monday all persons who wish to get married must, in the first instance, present themselves at the office of the Recorder in the Court House, south wing. The applicant will be asked first whether he is single and above the age of 21 years? Then he will be questioned concerning the lady of his choice, whether she is unmarried and above the age of 18 years? If the responses are in accordance with legal provision, and the applicant states that he knows of no impediment to the marriage, Recorder Irwin will adjust his glasses, assume a benign expression and fill in the following form of license:

STATE OF MISSOURI, }
CITY OF ST. LOUIS. }

This license authorizes any Judge, Justice of the Peace, licensed or ordained Preacher of the Gospel or other person authorized under the laws of this State, to solemnize marriage between ——, of ——, who is above the age of 21 years, and ——, of ——, who is above the age of 18 years.

Witness my hand as Recorder, with the seal of office hereto affixed, at my office in the City of St. Louis the —— day of ——, 188—.

CHAS. W. IRWIN,
Recorder.

The applicant upon receiving the above license pays the Recorder one dollar, the fee provided by law. When the marriage is solemnized he presents the certificate to the minister, judge or officer performing the ceremony, who fills in the following certificate attached to the license:

State of Missouri, City of St. Louis.

This is to certify that the undersigned ——did in said city and State on the —— day of ——, 188—, unite in marriage the above-named persons.

(Signed,) ——

The above certificate is to be returned with the license to the Recorder's office by the person solemnizing the marriage within ninety days under penalty of $100.

Any person solemnizing a marriage on and after Monday next wherein the parties have not obtained a license as above shall be deemed guilty of misdemeanor, and shall be fined upon conviction not exceeding $500, and in addition shall be subject to civil action by parent or guardian wherein the recovery shall not exceed $500.

A Signal Service Officer.

Lieutenant Sebree, of the Signal Service corps, passed through the Union Depot this morning on his way from Washington to San Antonio where he takes charge of twelve hundred miles of Government telegraph lines. The Lieutenant has relatives here in the family of Captain A. J. Stiles, but immediate demands of his new duties precluded a stay in the city. A messenger was sent to notify Sergeant Weber of the Lieutenant's presence but the sergeant failed to reach the depot in time to pay his respects.

AWHILE ago, said Mrs. Dr. A. A. Jordan, 51 Lincoln street, Worcester, Mass., one of my friends from the South spoke to me very highly of St. Jacobs Oil. I resolved to try it on my patients, and I must confess that I was surprised at the results. It has never failed to cure all that it claims to, and I prescribe it willingly and confidently to those of my patients who suffer with rheumatism, sprains and all bodily pains. It is certainly a wonderful remedy, and I can highly recommend it to the public.

Fined Costs.

"Call Mary Mullen," ordered Judge Jecko this morning. A young woman carrying a child in her arms was released from the dock. The officer took the stand and testified that he arrested the defendant in a saloon at Eleventh and Chestnut streets when she was drinking. He had previously seen her begging money on the streets. The woman said she was obliged to beg. She was fine costs.

CARONDELET JOTTINGS.

Peter Croumery persisted in using a wagon without a license till he was arrested and arraigned in the Police Court this morning. His case was continued till the 24th inst. August Geinhandt, charged with the same offense, had his case postponed till the 27th. John Heffermann pleaded guilty and was fined costs.

Fred Waldecker failed to appear in court this morning to answer for using the streets with a wagon without a license and forfeited his bond. Belfast Brown pleaded guilty and was fined costs. Theodore Spirner failed to appear and forfeited his bond. Wm. Loewenan was fined costs. John Lee had his case continued till June 27. Charles Groll was found guilty and assessed costs. A. Enge's case was postponed till June 29 and Joseph Neamer pleaded guilty and paid costs. Several other arrests for running wagons on the public throughfares without license were made after the adjournment of court and they will have a hearing to-morrow.

Charles Gregg, a young man with a very excitable disposition was using profane, obsene and offensive language last night which worked so on his nervous system that he became violent, tumultuous and obstreperous in his conduct. Officer Gray remonstrated with him, but all in vain. Gray then attempted to take him to the station, but he assumed a belligerent attitude. He was arrested, however, after a tussle with the officer. He was arraigned in the Police Court this morning to answer to the two charges, of resisting an officer in the discharge of his duty and using such language in the streets. Gregg demanded a trial by jury, which was granted, and his case set for June 25.

Rupture Cured!
OVER 600 CASES
Since the establishment of the Vienna Institute in this city over 600 ruptured persons have applied to us for relief. This included every variety of rupture, from the small incomplete to the large and double rupture of 30 to 42 years standing, measuring in some cases 20 to 21 inches in circumference, as in the case of Messrs Geo. Loehr, 1516 North Market street; Frank Schmidt, 1312 N. Eleventh street, and others. Many of these persons when they applied to us were utterly unable to perform manual labor on account of the frightful proportions of their ruptures and constant danger of strangulation. They are now completely restored to health. We have abundant testimony from physicians who have examined our patients, and the patients themselves will substantiate the above.
The Vienna Institute, for the cure of hernia, is permanently established at 1113 Washington avenue, this city.
Our method is not a surgical operation, is applicable to both sexes, does not interfere with one's occupation and is not painful.
